WELFARE AND WHEREABOUTS INQUIRIES

As a result of Hurricane Katrina, thousands of people within the United States and abroad have lost contact with their loved ones.

- 1) Contacting Foreign Nationals Possible Affected by Hurricane Katrina: We would like to advise concerned family members of foreign nationals residing or traveling in areas affected by Hurricane Katrina to try to reach their family members by phone, e-mail or other available means.

If they cannot reach their family members directly, we recommend they contact their embassy in Washington, DC for assistance. Reports from the region indicated that some phone lines are working but experiencing heavy call volume, so family members should be encouraged to keep trying.

The Federal Emergency Management Agency (www.fema.gov) and the American Red Cross (www.redcross.org) both have web sites available that contain information on the current conditions in the region.

- 2) Find Loved Ones: Governmental and non-governmental Resources:
